▶GEMFIELDS*

Three records broken

Last week, Gemfields published results of its commercial quality emerald auction. Revenues were US$23.1m, a record for a commercial quality emerald auction. As impressive was the new record average price of US$6.61/carat, which bodes well for future pricing and reflects strong demand for the product. FY21 auction revenues now stand at US$113.4m with two more auctions planned for 4Q21.

Although we didn't expect such strong revenues from this auction, we keep our FY21 revenue estimate unchanged at US$161m for now. Our rationale is the potential impact of the COVID Delta variant on the 4Q auctions, for example from future travel restrictions in South and South East Asia. If both auctions go smoothly, our FY21 auction revenues would likely require upgrading.

- Three records broken: In addition to the record revenues and record average price, the auction had the "highest number of companies participating in the bidding". MD of Product & Sales Adrian Banks commented "We've witnessed a step-change in both market demand and in the prices bid by our clients, paving the way for an exhilarating cycle in the coloured gemstone sector".
- US$712m emerald revenues: Including the first auction in July 2009, Gemfields has held 38 auctions and generated US$712m.
- Commercial quality rubies in future: Gemfields does not as yet produce and market commercial quality rubies, likely a larger and more profitable market than CQ emeralds.
- Management plans to construct a new wash plant at Montepuez in CY22 or CY23 (definitive timing not announced). This would enable production of a commercial quality ruby product, in addition to increased volumes of the current mixed quality production.
- Summary: YTD revenues emphasise a strong underlying coloured gemstone market. This latest auction appears to show CQ emerald demand growth alongside some pent-up demand. The strong pricing is an important anchor. We expect consistent sales growth going forward (in a post COVID world) from emeralds, but more from the ruby division. We calculate a £222m valuation and 19p target price.
